Consumption Gured. THE JUDGE OF MANOVER

Tim. Howard suffered for three years with lung and throat troubles, and last spring was thought by his neighbors to be dying. I heard of his condition and gave him A. B. C. Tonic. Its effect was magical. In a very short time he was able to leave his bed, and now regards himself a well man. Others in this vicinity have taken the "Tonic" with pronounced benefit.

When we hear the stories about the czar's peril from Nihilists, we cannot help wondering why he does not take he most natural means of lessening his danger. The threats against his life are not made in mere wantonness. The men who would assassinate him with as little compunction as they would shoot a mad dog, feel that they have provocation and that they would be doing a service to the world by sending a tyrant out of it. The out-rages in Siberia, that seem to have as-sumed a more horrible character lately sumed a more horrible character lately than for some years previous, have stirred up the feeling against the government to a greater height than ever. It is as the incarnation of the government that the czar is execrated. Would not the simplest way to restrain the indignation of the people be to show a disposition to institute a thorough reform in the methods of ruling?

He refuses absolutewill yet surely compass his death. And he wears armor under his clothes and sets his police to work to keep assassins away, even when he goes to church to commune upon his knees with his maker. In what sort of spirit he pursues his devotions can only be surmised.
